History

CHITRAL and its sister ship CATHAY were both built in 1961 and operated under the P&O line. While serving in Australian waters CHITRAL was used by P&O's subsidiary company Eastern and Australian Lines between 1971 and 1975 to carry passengers between Japan, China and Australia. It provided a regular passenger service with comfortable and entertaining facilities. The P&O Steam Navigation Company purchased the vessel and used it for passengers and freight. On 3 December 1975 CHITRAL was sold to Choy's Iron & Steel Company for scrapping in Taiwan.
