History

The Marine Cooks' Bakers' & Butchers' Association of Australasia was formed in 1908 after branching from the Federated Marine Stewards and Pantrymen's Association and operated until 1983 when it amalgamated into the Seamen's Union of Australia. In 1993 a further amalgamation between the Seamen's Union and the Waterside Workers' Federation of Australia created the Maritime Union of Australia. William J Heath worked as a marine cook and was a significant figure in the Marine Cooks' Bakers' & Butchers' Association and then the Seaman's Union from the 1950s to the 1980s. He was the ACTU nominee to the Seamen's War Pensions and Allowances Committee from 1974 to 1984 and active in trade union and welfare work for Australian mariners. The ANMM collection includes a large archive of material and ephemera relating to William (Bill) Heath's career as a marine cook and his trade union and welfare work.
